The Youth of South Carolina in World War II

Volume II

Breathes there a man with soul so dead,
Who never to himself hath said,
This is my own, my native land!
Whose heart hath ne'er within him burned,
As home his footsteps he hath turned,
From wandering on a foreign strand!—SCOTT.

Foreword

THAT Americans may never forget their debt of gratitude to those heroes and heroines who offered their lives in defense of their country in her hour of greatest need is the primary purpose of this book. Another purpose is to present a work which will be a source of pleasure to the service men and women and their families and friends; and we believe we are accomplishing this purpose by making it possible for them to have in one-volume the likenesses of service men and women as they were at the time they were playing their part in the Second World War. Such a work will become more highly treasured with time, because separations will cause the pictures of old comrades to be more cherished in the future.

The publishers wish that their work may not only be a source of pleasure to those who participated in the War, but that it may impress upon all the fact that Americans in the critical period since the attack on Pearl Harbor have shown the same courage and devotion that animated our country's heroes in earlier periods of our history. The nation whose life began with the Declaration of Independence has seen its sons and daughters offering their lives in defense of the Four Freedoms wherever they have been threatened by those who would destroy them.

The services and sacrifices of the heroes of 1941 and subsequent years must not be in vain. Our greatest hope is that a new world of freedom and goodwill may be attained. No other goal is worthy of the sacrifices of those to whom so much is owed by so many.

SOUTH CAROLINA IN WORLD WAR II

I. The Palmetto State

South Carolina—the Palmetto State—has been called the least written about and the least understood of all the states that have played an important part in our history.

That statement was made before World War II.

Because South Carolina responded in full measure—and more—to the demands of that great conflict, it seems advisable to set down something of the record which the State made in those critical years. Reference to it may create a fuller consciousness and understanding of the State's role in at least this phase of the story of America.

Historic old South Carolina—eighth state to ratify the Federal Constitution, first state to secede in the Confederate War—is small in area and in population. Triangular in shape, it covers only 30,989 square miles, 494 of which consist of water area. Highest point is Sassafras Mountain (altitude, 3,548 feet) almost on the North Carolina boundary. From it the land drops away to the Atlantic Ocean, with the mean altitude of the State estimated at 350 feet.

Within the borders of the Palmetto State lived, in 1940, 1,899,804 people, a figure which the 1950 census should show has been considerably increased during the past decade. For generations there has been a definite cleavage among these people. South Carolina has its Low Country and its Up Country, and the residents of each section are as different as the sections themselves. Between them is a rather small middle region, whose inhabitants possess some of the characteristics of both their more advertised neighbors. While this division is gradually dying out, many more decades must pass before the Up Country and the Low Country are really unified—except in periods of crisis like that of World War II. Regardless of class or color or creed, those distinctions, stemming perhaps from basic geographical differences, prevail.

The hospitable, courteous, easy-going Low Countryman, speaking in his own special intonation, recalls his past glory with a pride that almost surpasses his ability to appreciate thoroughly the progress of the present. Philosophically, his attitude is keyed to leisure; he has little interest in hours of concentrated work designed merely to produce material wealth. Personal values still remain more important to him.

Just as proud of his past is to the Up Country South Carolinian, who possesses many of the qualities of his southern kinsman. Thrifty and industrious, he generally shows more physical energy and more concern about the accumulation of worldly goods than does his Low Country brother.

In "South Carolina—A Guide to the Palmetto State", this summary statement occurs:

"The average South Carolinian—assuming there is one—would not be found among the intellectuals throughout the State, nor in the larger group of comparatively uneducated adults, likewise scattered from the mountains to the sea; he would be between these two groups, and somewhat nearer the second. He is primarily a South Carolinian, and it took the World War to bring the realization that he is also a citizen of the United States.

"The South Carolinian is a product of many conflicts, as well as of great unifying forces. Incongruities and contrasts abound in his environment. With some of the most beautiful gardens in the world, the State has some of the most deplorable slums; with flourishing estates owned by outside sportsmen, there are rows of dilapidated cabins where whites or Negroes live on the barest subsistence level; with great natural resources, the State has one of the lowest per capita ratings of wealth in the United States; with a variety of pleasure resorts from mountains to seacoast, there is almost a total lack of recreational facilities in the rural areas; with some of the best farm lands in the world, there are hundreds of thousands of acres so depleted that they are unfit for agriculture; with a record of some of the earliest efforts in the country for public education, both white and Negro, the State had in 1930 the highest illiteracy rate in the Nation."[1]

"The composite South Carolinian . . . will be an individual full of contrasts and antagonisms, yet loyal to traditions of courtesy and personal dignity to an almost fanatical degree. There is a deal of kindliness about him, too. From one end of the State to the other, he feels favored when asked for personal assistance. A neighborly spirit, derived from years when everyone was poor, from living in small communities, and from a native love of hospitality, prompts him to render services with a scorn for remuneration.

"The South Carolinian has fire in his head, comfort in his middle, and a little lead in his feet. Proud of his past, often scornful of innovations, he is not willing to adapt unless thoroughly convinced that it is a good thing. Not given to the desperate pursuit of wealth, he has time for pleasure and humorous converse. His way of life is leisurely, despite his slack economic habits; and though he progresses slowly, he performs his daily task to the accompaniment of a tune. He knows his faults, at least many of them. He will discuss them and propose remedies—but woe to the outsider who reminds him of them. The faults of his State are as personal to him as a wart on his nose."[2]

Populated by such people, South Carolina has always been ready to do its part in every national undertaking.

This was as true in World War II as at any other time in the State's history.

South Carolinians from the outset saw the threat to liberty that the Nazi and Fascist systems offered, and many of the State's leading men had raised their voices in protest against the course of events abroad long before it became apparent to everybody that this country was certain to be involved in the conflict. That was the more interesting because the State's people—and their fathers before them—are almost all native to Palmetto soil. In 1940 only 0.3% of the population were foreign-born. States with a higher percentage of residents born abroad or with more second-generation American citizens might reasonably be expected to be somewhat more immediately concerned with what was going on in Europe. But South Carolinians, in spite of their native-American background, were fully aware of the issues and ready from the beginning for what came. They entered the war period with the calm assurance that that low percentage of non-native-born residents would guarantee a minimum of loyalty problems in the State. In that they were entirely correct.

II. War Leaders from the Palmetto State

Probably no other state of comparable size gave more to the leadership of the American war effort than did South Carolina. The Palmetto State made extremely notable contributions to the personnel of high government circles in the form of its distinguished statesmen-sons, Bernard M. Baruch and James F. Byrnes. Colonel J. Monroe Johnson was another who rendered valiant service in Washington, as did the State's United States Senators Ellison D. Smith and Burnet R. Maybank, along with the members of the delegation to the lower House, Congressmen L. Mendel Rivers, Hampton P. Fulmer, Butler B. Hare, Joseph R. Bryson, James P. Richards, and John L. McMillan.

Serving on the home front in the state itself in posts of distinction were Brig. Gen. Holmes B. Springs (retired), Adjutant General James C. Dozier, Major G. Heyward Mahon, Jr., Hon. Christie Benet, and Governor Olin D. Johnston.

Outstanding among the many who saw active service on the fighting fronts were the present Governor of the State, J. Strom Thurmond; Brig. Gen. Floyd L. Parks; and Nurse Juanita Redmond.

Bernard M. Baruch, the nation's great elder statesman of the twentieth century, was born in Camden, South Carolina, August 19, 1870. He was the second son of Doctor Simon Baruch, who had emigrated in 1855 at the age of fifteen from Schmerseng, East Prussia, to the United States. The father attended South Carolina Medical College and later went to the Medical College of Virginia for further study. Not unnaturally, in view of these many southern contacts, he joined the Confederate Army as a surgeon.

During the Reconstruction Period the Baruch family moved north, and Bernard attended the College of the City of New York, graduating in 1889. A business genius, by the time he was thirty he had made himself a millionaire. Truly public-spirited, Baruch has had a number of outstanding milestones in his career. However, from the standpoint of the nation the most significant was his meeting with Woodrow Wilson, for ever since then Baruch has been a dominant figure in the councils of state. From the beginning Wilson sought the advice and help of this new friend. In August, 1916, the President named Baruch a member of the Advisory Commission on the Council of National Defense, and in 1918 he became chairman of the War Industries Board, a key position in the control of the economic life of the county at that time. At the end of World War I he attended the Paris Peace Conference in an advisory capacity.

Through the twelve Republican years that followed the Wilson administration, Democrat Baruch offered his services as advisor whenever he belived that he could be of help, and in many instances his counsel was accepted. He had no office, no title, but his influence in the national scene was considerable. Naturally it increased when his own political party returned to power, although at the outset of the New Deal he does not appear to have been too close to President Roosevelt. As the national emergency became greater the President called on Mr. Baruch for assistance more frequently and their friendship ripened so that in later years Mr. Roosevelt spent some time at the Baruch estate, Hobcaw Barony, near Georgetown, South Carolina, Especially after his friend and fellow South Carolinian, Jame F. Byrnes, became Director of the Office of War Mobilization, Baruch undertook more and more work for the government, making important surveys and recommendations on the rubber problem, the manpower difficulties, and other. On March 18, 1946, Mr. Baruch was given perhaps the most imposing task of his long career when President Truman drafted the parkbench philospher as the U. S. Representative on the United Nations Atomic Energy Commission.

Baruch has acquired a long list of momentous titles and most South Carolinians think of him, with some awe, as without doubt their greatest native son since John C. Calhoun.

But Mr. Baruch has been gone from the Palmetto State for many years save for occasional visits to his secluded plantation home, and Carolinians therefore do not know him very well. He is simply a colossal figure about whom they read in their papers. For that reason much more warm-hearted affection is extended by Carolinians to their other great modern statesman, James F. Byrnes, familiarly known as "Jimmy." They are better acquainted with him, for he has been an important figure on their political stage for a quarter of a century. As would be expected from so successful a political advocate, Byrnes has moved among the people, shaking hands and forming friendships that now are legion in number.

James Francis Byrnes was born in Charleston, South Carolina, on May 2, 1879, of Irish parentage. He was educated in the public schools, in which he left at the age of 14 to become office boy of a law firm. By studing stenography, he advanced to the position of court reporter and served eight years in that post in the second judicial circuit of South Carolina. His ability as a stenographer has been of value to him all during his career. Even at such important international conferences as Yalta, Tehran and Potsdam, he took down many of his own notes.

Byrnes was admitted to the bar in 1903. Following his court reporter experience, he served as solicitor in the same circuit for the two years 1908 to 1910. In the summer of the latter year he was elected on the Democratc ticket as a member of the House of Representatives, taking his seat in the spring of 1911. He was re-elected six times, serving until 1925, when he began the practice of law in Spartanburg. In 1930 he was elected junior United States Senator and won a second term in 1936. However, he resigned to accept appointment, in June, 1941, as an Associate Justice of the United States Supreme Court. This designation came at the hands of Franklin D. Roosevelt with whom Byrnes had formed a lasting friendship during World War I, when the South Carolinian was a member of the House deficiency committee and Roosevelt was an assistant secretary of the Navy. After serving 16 months on the supreme bench, Mr. Justice Byrnes resigned to accept appointment, on October 3, 1942, as Director of Economic Stabilization. Resignation was his own idea, much as he loved the court. The President had suggested that Byrnes take a leave of absence from the Court, but Byrnes felt that no one could extend a leave to a Supreme Court Justice and that resignation was the only course open to him. This voluntary surrender of a lifetime post in the work that he particularly enjoyed is typical of Byrnes' heroic service to his country at all times.

On May 28, 1943, he was moved into another newly created office, topping all other government agencies, the Office of War Mobilization. His job was to settle disputes between top administrators, bring about increased coordination between agencies and smooth out relations with Congress. One of his first acts in this post was to name Baruch as his personal adviser. During the latter months of 1943, Byrnes took much of the responsibility for holding down wages and prices. After much strenuous work, he resigned this post in the spring of 1945 and returned to South Carolina. Within a few weeks the death of President Roosevelt brought him back to Washington and in July of 1945 he succeeded Edward R. Stettinius, Jr., as Secretary of State. Attorney Donald Russell of Spartanburg became an assistant secretary.

Byrnes' negotiations for the new administration were trying indeed. Almost immediately after he took office he accompanied President Truman to Potsdam, and also attended the various meetings of the Council of Foreign Ministers within the next two years. On January 20, 1947, he resigned the Secretaryship and returned to the Palmetto State in search of rest and health. South Carolinians salute him as a patriot who answered the all of his country at every turn and gave of himself and his ability without stint.

Still another South Carolinian held a great administrative post on the Washington scene. He was charged with the somewhat formidable task of keeping the wheels of American transportation rolling during the emergency created by the war. He was Col. J. Monroe Johnson of Marion, whom President Roosevelt named Director of the Office of Defense Transportation on April 4, 1944. Faced with unprecedented problems of an increasing traffic in military passengers and freight at the same time that civilian needs had to be met, this civil engineer turned in a fine job.

Born in Marion on May 5, 1878, Colonel Johnson was educated at the University of South Carolina and Furman University. His studies were interrupted by the outbreak of the Spanish-American War. He volunteered, and emerged from the conflict as a sergeant. Returning home, he opened an engineering office in Marion, which office has been continuously in operation since 1898. He kept up his interest in military affairs, and in 1916, at the request of the governor, he recruited a company of military engineers for service on the Mexican border. In 1917 he was again asked by the governor to recruit and head a battalion of engineers. He accepted the assignment with the proviso that the group would be given immediate overseas service. In twelve hectic days Johnson organized what became the first battalion, 117th Engineers, of the famous Rainbow Division whose chief was Douglas MacArthur. Johnson participated in all the Division's campaigns and later served with the army of occupation. For his services he won the Distinguished Service Medal, the French Medal of Honor, and the Belgian Honor of Leopold II.

After the war, Johnson resumed his engineering career, but in 1935 he beame Assistant Secretary of Commerce in the Roosevelt administration. In this capacity he had jurisdiction over all the transportation activities of the department and made himself heard on many issues. In 1936 he urged immediate moderation of our merchant fleet and put up a fight for it. President Roosevelt appointed him a member of the Interstate Commerce Commission in May, 1940. Shortly after he assumed his new duties, he was placed in charge of the Bureau of Service, which supervised the use, control, supply, movement, exchange and distribution of locomotives, cars, and other vehicles employed in the transportation of freight. All of this provided thorough grounding for the post that was to follow and which he filled so well.

Two other South Carolinians of importance on the Washington front in this period were Harry Slattery, who served for a time as personal assistant to Secretary of the Interior Harold Ickes and who was also administrator of the Rural Electrification Adminstration from 1939 to 1944; and R. W. "Pete" Hudgens, who was for ten years regional director and associate administrator of the Farm Security Administration. Two others saw service on the fighting fronts during the war itself, but have since handled important posts in the national capital. Major-General Robert M. Littlejohn of Jonesville took the oath of office as War Assets Administrator on July 28, 1946. The present director of public relations of the Department of the Army is Major-General Floyd L. Parks of Greenville, a veteran of both world wars. A graduate of Clemson College, General Parks is a former commander of the First Airborne Army, and also saw service as chief of staff of Army Ground Forces from June, 1942, to February, 1943. Hon. John F. Puerifoy of Walterboro has rendered fine service in the War and State Departments.

On the home front valiant service was performed by Brig. Gen. Holmes B. Springs of Myrtle Beach. A retired 30th Division veteran of World War I who also served on the Mexican border in 1916, General Springs had become one of the state's most successful businessmen. When his country, called, however, he was ready. He was named State Director of Selective Service for South Carolina as soon as the system was set up. He served throughout the war, and his organization handled the conscription of thousands of men into the armed forces of the United States. The total number of men registering in the state between October 16, 1940, and December 31, 1942, was 412,801. Of these 243,861 were White, 168,940 Negro. Of these 254,893 were called, and 139,444 were actually accepted. Of those remaining, 84,849 were rejected for service, 7,067 failed to report, and the State fell short on calls by 23,532. This shortage can be accounted for through last minute changes in regulations which deferred the induction of certain classes of registrants, such as fathers, illiterates, and certain age groups, and because of shortages in qualified men existing at the time in certain local board areas.

Of the White registrants examined in this period 28.21 per cent were rejected. Of the Negroes, 49.30 per cent could not be accepted. In the period from the beginning of Selective Service to August 1, 1945, a total of 291,600 men was examined in South Carolina, and 128,900 (44.2 per cent) were rejected. These included 158,900 whites, of whom 53,800 (33.9 per cent) were rejected, and 132,700 Negroes, of whom 75,100 (56.6 per cent) were rejected. Rejection rates by states varied from 22.2 in New Jersey to 36.8 in North Carolina for white men examined. For Negroes the lowest rejection rate was 33 (New Jersey and West Virginia) and the highest 56.6 in South Carolina.

General Springs of course headed a rather large staff, not all of whom can be named in a brief survey. Particularly valuable to him, however, were Col. W. N. Cork, Assistant State Director; Col. John F. Moore, Finance and Procurement Officer; Lt. Col. Edward H. Barnwell, Medical Officer; Lt. Col. Frank D. Pinckney, of the Registration and Classification Office, and his successor, Lt. Col. L. K. Brice, who also served as Legal Advisor; Col. S. A. Ligon and Capt. Roy J. Broome, of Finance and Procurement; Major George C. Warren, Induction and Delivery Officer; Major Banks C. Talley, Occupational Advisor; and his predecessor, Lt. R. W. Norman; Commander I. E. Blatt and Lt. Commander W. A. Boyd, Naval Liaison Officers; Major D. A. Holladay and Capt. C. H. Hyams, Marine Corps Liaison Officers; Col. L. G. Osborne, Public Relations; and R. B. Scarpa, Personnel Officer.

Besides the State Headquarters, the Selective Service organization included 83 local boards and three appeals boards. One or more Local Boards were established in each of the forty-six counties in the State, each having a specific number. Upon the recommendation of the Governor, the President of the United States appointed three members for each Local Board, one government appeal agent, and one examining physician. Later additional examining physicians, white and colored, examining dentists, associate government appeal agents were apponted as the need for their services arose. The Appeals Boards were made up of five members each, similarly appointed. There were twelve Medical Advisory Boards, as well as an Advisory Board for Registrants in each county.

The men appointed to these posts worked without compensation. Most of them served throughout the entire emergency, and South Carolina appreciates the splendid work they gave.

III. Civilian Defense Organization

One of the best organized activities on the home front in South Carolina was the State Council of Civilian Defense. Activated August 1, 1940, it was one of the first such organizations to be set up anywhere in the country, and throughout its existence it remained one of the most efficient in operation. Dr. Willam P. Jacobs, then President of Presbyterian College, was Chairman, but he himself has said that the success of the organization was due in large measure to the valiant, patriotic and unselfish services of the State Director, Major G. Heyward Mahon, Jr., of Greenville, a World War I veteran and former Congressman, and his competent co-workers, Colonel John A. Brockman and Mrs. W. D. Melton.

The Council was very active, both before the American entrance into the war and after. Included among the many projects on which it worked were the efforts: to have Camp Jackson made a permanent post and to have troops of the regular army remain there; to have a naval arms depot established near Charleston; to secure an aluminum plant for the state; to have the Santee-Cooper project declared a National Defense Project; to have Clark's Hill Project application approved; to arrange for housing facilities in the Charleston community for army personnel; to get a cement plant established in order that the state might get its fair share of Federal projects and orders under the National Defense Act; and to act as a fact-finding body wherever necessary. The Council also labored hard to secure the Charleston hospital and it made every effort to get a coordinator of housing, which was always a problem everywhere in the state as workers and members of the armed forces swarmed over areas which had no provision to care for large numbers of outsiders.

The Council coordinated its work with that of the State Director of Selective Service. It also engaged law enforcement agents in the various counties of the maneuver area to act as liaison men among the various sheriffs, Army and Navy Constables, and the Highway Patrol. Part of the Council's appropriation was made available for law enforcement use inconnection with the Federal Bureau of Investigation. The Council also carried on complete defense organization work, with many practice blackouts and drills all over the state. Thousands of handbooks to be used in the training of Air Raid Wardens, Auxiliary Firemen and others, were distributed throughout the state, and a fire-fighter service was established. A Medical Division was formed which worked as a unit through South Carolina. The Council also employed a State Rationing Administrator, and established a sub-committee on Retail Food Price Surveys.

All in all, the State Defense Council was by far the most active of civilian agencies, with the possible exception of the Selective Service boards. The people of South Carolina did a better job of their day-to-day work because of their realization that Major Mahon and his colleagues had made the defense of the state, if it became necessary, virtually foolproof.

There was also a Preparedness for Peace Commission authorized by state law and set up under the guidance of the legislature and the governor. But its work was primarily to make plans for the post-war period in the State, rather than to contribute actively to the immediate war effort. That work was well done, and the final Report of the Commission recommends many reforms, especially in governmental organization, which the State hopes to bring about in the not too far distant future.

IV. Palmetto Money Goes to War

Modern war is an expensive item, and the raising of the necessary funds is a major undertaking. In South Carolina the financial side of the battle for democracy, as represented in the sale of war bonds and stamps, was under the general direction of former U. S. Senator Christie Benet of Columbia. His organization of the drives in the various counties was well nigh perfect. Under his leadership a total of $695,857,064 in war bonds of all types was sold in the period from May 1, 1941, through December 31, 1945. Of this total $263,281,887.50 was in the form of E bonds. Greenville County, in which Ellis M. Johnston served as county chairman, was consistently the leader in sales, with a total of approximately $90,000,000, or 13% of the amount sold in the state's 46 counties.

In addition to the official financing of the war, as represented in the purchase of war bonds and stamps and the payment of greatly increased taxes, the people of South Carolina gave most generously to all the many drives for war-connected activities. Campaigns for the Red Cross, the U. S. O. and other such agencies were unusually well supported in the Palmetto State.

V. Fighting Men and Women

There were of course many thousands of young South Carolinians who risked their lives on the actual fighting fronts, and in all of them their fellow-citizens of the Palmetto State take the greatest pride.

There were some, however, who stood out even above the others. Thus Carolinians of all political faiths salute the military record of their present governor, J. Strom Thurmond of Edgefield, States' Rights candidate for the Presidency of the United States in 1948. Born in Edgefield on December 5, 1902, Thurmond is a graduate of Clemson College. After graduation he spent several years as a teacher and lawyer, having read law in his father's office at night and having taken a correspondence course in law. He was admitted to the bar in 1930. In 1924, at the age of 22, he became a member of the Edgefield County Board of Education, and was promoted to the post of county superintendent of education in 1929. He held that office until 1933, when he was elected State Senator from Edgefield County. As a Senator he was a member of the Social Security Committee which drafted the first law providing for state assistance to the aged, the blind, and to needy children; he was also an advocate of legislation to improve the state's education system, to better labor conditions, and to protect farmers. As a member of the joint House-Senate Committee, he helped to write the state's first Rural Electrification Act. In 1938, at the age of 35, Thurman became the youngest circuit judge in South Carolina.

On the outbreak of World War II Judge Thurmond obtained a leave of absence from the bench in order to serve in the Army. He enlisted on December 11, 1941, the day this country declared war on Germany. From 1924 to 1937 he had been a member of the Officers' Reserve Corps, and had been an officer in the State Guard. He went on active duty with the First Army in April, 1942, and was a member of the 82nd Airborne Division during the invasion of Europe. Until V-E Day he saw action with the First Army in the European area. He was then transferred to the Pacific Theater, where he served in the Philippines. When he was discharged with the rank of Lieutenant Colonel in January, 1946, he wore the Legion of Merit, the Bronze Star, the Army Commendation Ribbon, the Purple Heart (won in Normandy on D Day), the Presidental Distinguished Unit Citation, the Bronze Arrowhead, five battle stars, the Cross of Military Service awarded by the United Daughters of the Confederacy, the Cross of the Officer of the Order of the Crown awarded by Belgium, and the Croix de Guerre with Etoile de Vermeil, awarded by France.

He returned to the bench after his discharge, but resigned in May, 1946, to campaign successfully for the state's governorship.

Another famous fighter whom South Carolina claims as her own was "The Major of St. Lo," Thomas D. Howie. He entered the army from Staunton, Virginia, where he formerly taught English literature and coached boxing and football at Staunton Military Academy; but he was born in Abbeville, South Carolina, and was an athletic star at The Citadel in Charleston. At St. Lo he became one of the most beloved battalion leaders in the American Army. He was killed the day before the city fell, after he and his men had broken through the Nazi wall to relieve another battalion of their regiment which had been encircled in the outskirts.

Major Juanita Redmond of Swansea, S. C., saw as much war as most of our soldiers. She wears two oak leaves for service on Bataan and Corregidor, and two ribbons—one for pre-Pearl Harbor service, one for service in the Pacific. In her popular book, "I Served on Bataan," Miss Redmond told of the heroic work of the nurses during the dreadful siege, and of the way in which they labored under fire to care for the ever-growing casualty list.

At pesent she is stationed in Washington as Assistant to the Superintendent of Nurses of the Army Air Forces. She recently earned her wings by successfully completing the flight nurses' course of the Air Force School of Air Evacuation at Bowman Field—a course that didn't exist when the war began. When she visits her home in Swansea or the State Hospital at Columbia, S. C., in which she took her training, she gets a heroine's reception. She deserves it.

South Carolina also provided the United States Navy with several officers who held Admiralty rank during World War II. Especially prominent among them was Rear Admiral Norman M. Smith of Williston. A graduate of the United States Naval Academy, Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute, and the Naval War College, Smith rose through the ranks of the service to attain the rank of Rear Admiral on December 23, 1933. As an engineering officer, he had been engaged in the construction and maintenance of many bases and yards, including the Great Lakes base and the yards at Puget Sound and Mare Island. In the years 1914 to 1917, he was in command of the building of the naval base at Pearl Harbor. He also built the air station and all the naval establishments at the San Diego Naval Base. From 1933 to January, 1938, he was Chief of the Bureau of Yards and Docks and the chief civil engineer of the Navy. Retiring at that time, he returned to active duty with the Naval Construction Battalions in 1942. In December, 1944, he was elected president of the University of South Carolina. He retired from naval service and assumed his University duties on February 1, 1945.

Other South Carolina Admirals who served unfailingly were Vice-Admiral P. N. S. Bellinger; and Rear Admirals W. H. Allen, W. S. Popham, R. Bentham Simons, Frank P. Morton, and Charles M. Furlow, Jr.

General Officers in the Marine Corps from the State were Lt. Gen. James T. Moore, Major Generals Emil P. Moses, Harry K. Pickett, and Lewie G. Merritt; and Brigadier General William C. James, William L. McKittrick, and Willam O. Brice, the last two of whom are still on active duty. General Moore, born in Barnwell and a graduate of the Citadel, has been in the Marine Corps since 1916, advancing through the ranks. In World War I he saw service in Santo Domingo, and was later in Guam, Haiti, China and Peru. In World War II he became departmental commander of marine aircraft wing in the South Pacific area.

General Merritt has also spent his adult lifetime in the Marines, rising through the ranks. General McKittrick, born in Pelzer and a graduate of The Citadel, has been a Marine since 1918. In the period before World War II, he served with Marine aviation units in Santo Domingo, Haiti, the Virgin Islands, and Nicaragua. After the great conflict broke out, he served as commander of the Marine aircraft group in the Solomons campaign and the Bougainville operation, and as air defense commander in the Marianas Islands operation, General Price, born in Columbia but a resident of Winnsboro, is also a graduate of The Citadel and has been in the Marines since 1921. He, too, has advanced through the grades.

The Palmetto State also contributed its share of Army General Officers. Major General James A. Lester, born in Prosperity and a graduate of The Citadel, the United States Military Academy, and the Army War College, is a veteran of both World Wars. An artilleryman, he served overseas in World War II, commanding the 24th Division of the 14th Artillery Corps in the operations at Hollandia, Bougain-ville, Luzon and Manila. He served on General MacArthur's staff in the Philippines as provost marshal general and he was commanding general of the Philippine constabulary until December, 1945, when he became commander of the 24th Infantry division in Japan.

Major General Robert M. Littlejohn of Jonesville, a 1912 graduate of West Point, has spent his career in the Quartermaster Corps, becoming chief quartermaster for the European theater in June, 1942. He was made War Assets Administrator in 1946.

Major General Edward F. Witsell, born in Charleston, is a graduate of The Citadel, the Chemical Warfare School, and the Army War College. Rising through the ranks, with service all over the world, he became Chief of Staff of the Hawaiian Department of the U. S. Army during World War I. In World War II he served as director of the military personnel division of the adjutant-general's office in the War Department, then as acting adjutant general. On February 1, 1946, President Truman appointed him Adjutant General.

Major General Albert E. Brown is another South Carolina graduate of the United States Military Academy who has given his life to the service. An infantryman, he served in World War II as a member of the U. S.—U. S. S. R. Commission. Other Major Generals from the Palmetto State were Ralph M. Pennell and John E. Sloan. Lieutenant General Robert C. Richardson, Jr., was also listed as a South Carolinian.

Brig. General Orlando C. Mood is a graduate of The Citadel and of the Command and General Staff School who now wears numerous decorations. General Thomas J. Davis, a native of West Union and a veteran of both wars, saw service in North Africa and at Supreme Headquarters, Allied Expeditionary Forces. Since February, 1946, he has been assistant to the Adjutant General of the War Department in Washington.

Brig. Gen. John T. Kennedy, born in Hendersonville but a resident of Orangeburg, is a graduate of West Point, the Command and General Staff School, and the Army War College. A much-decorated officer in both wars, he commanded Fort Bragg from December, 1941, to November, 1945. General Barnwell R. Legge of Charleston has also spent lifetime in the Army, with service all over the world and decorations to show for it. In September, 1939, he became United States Military Attache at Berne, Switzerland.

Brig. Gen. Gerson K. Heiss, born in Timmonsville, was educated at Porter Military Academy, Clemson College, and the Army Industrial Collgee. The first part of his career was spent in chemical warfare, but in 1923 he was commissioned a second lieutenant in the Ordnance Department and has risen through the grades.

Brig. Gen. William Lee Hart, of York, has had a distinguished career in Army medicine. A medical graduate of the University of Maryland, he also was educated in the Army Medical School, the Command and General Staff School, The Army Industrial School, and the Army War College. Serving as chief of the overseas division of the Office of the Surgeon General, he saw duty in Europe and later in the Philippines. He has made extensive researches in typhoid fever, smallpox, cholera, and the effect of tropical light on white people. He has been the recipient of many decorations, military and civilian, and has also acquired several honorary degrees.

Other Brigadier Generals listed from South Carolina are Wyburn D. Brown, Mervin E. Gross, Roland F. Walsh, John L. Whitelaw, LeRoy J. Stewart, Charles Frederick Colson, John H. Woodberry, John B. Montgomery, and Harry N. Robep.

Certainly the greatest contribution of all was that made by the men and women who turned from normal civilian pursuits to become members of the armed services. South Carolinians have never been people to wait to be drafted into a fight, and during the periods when voluntary enlistments were authorized 62,032 of them—including 3,687 Negroes—were able to get their personal affairs into sufficiently good shape to permit them to volunteer. Of these 3,708 were members of the National Guard.

The Army was especially popular with South Carolina men. Of the volunteers a little over half—30,535 Whites, 1,258 Negroes—chose that branch of the service. In addition, 109,814 South Carolina inductees—67,060 Whites, 42,754 Negroes—became members of that group. The supreme sacrifice was made by 3,420 of them, 1,920 being killed in action. Decorations were won by many Carolina fighters who distinguished themselves, and the coveted Medal of Honor was awarded to four of the State's soldiers. They were Thomas E. Atkins of Campobello; George L. Mabry of Sumter; William A. McWhorter of Liberty; and Furman L. Smith of Central.

The Navy, Marine Corps, and Coast Guard also had their share of young Carolinians. Volunteers for the Navy totalled 26,518, of whom 24,135 were White, 2,383 Negro; 25,982 more were inducted, 17,140 White, 8,842 Negro. The Marine Corps attracted 2,758 volunteers, of whom only nine were Negro; but there were 960 Negroes among the 3,406 men inducted into that branch of the service, compared with 2,446 Whites. Coast Guard volunteers added up to 963, of whom 926 were White, 37 Negro; they were joined by 150 White inductees, 92 Negro.

Of the Navy, Marine Corps, and Coast Guard men from the Palmetto State 1,581 lost their lives, 722 dying in combat.

There are no known winners of the Medal of Honor in the South Carolina naval contingent, but Robert A. Owens of Brayton won the cherished award in the Marine Corps.

In all there were 199,667 men in all the services from South Carolina, and the State delights in paying them honor.

Particular attention should be called to the fine spirit shown by the Palmetto State's many Negroes. South Carolina has a very large Negro population; so naturally it had a large number of colored citizens in the armed services. There would have been more of them had the educational facilities of the State been such that the high illiteracy rate among the Negroes could have been reduced. But 52,648 were inducted by the State Selective Service organization and 3,687 volunteered; so that a total of 56,335 served their country in the conflict, falling short in no way. The manner in which they conducted themselves has helped a great deal in the approach to a solution of the age-old problem of race relationships.

General Springs, in his report on Selective Service commented:

"Shortly after the program got under way, we realized that approximately 42% of the registrants of this State were Negroes. In order to familiarize them with the administration of the Act in South Carolina, we called a meeting of representative Negroes, among whom were the presidents of some of the Negro colleges of the State, for the purpose of outlining the policy of state headquarters with reference to these registrants. I am pleased to report that when we presented our policies to them they wholeheartedly accepted our program. Through publicity in the Negro press in editorials and otherwise, these leaders told their people that the Selective Service in this state would accord them the consideration which they deserved under the Act; and this has been done all through the administration. We did not put any Negroes on the Local Boards or Appeal Boards, the reason for which was explained to their satisfaction, but we did let them appoint their own Advisory Boards to registrants in each county, and we appointed all of the Negro Doctors, Dentists, Lawyers and others who were recommended and who were willing to serve without compensation. In that way we had very satisfactory cooperation from the Negroes of the State, and by the same token, the administration in-so-far as they are concerned, in my judgment, has been successful and fair to them."[3]

VI. Military Establishments

The all-year climate of South Carolina made the state especially suitable to the 365-day-a-year schedule so necessary in the speedy development of our armed forces. Therefore the state saw thousands of men pass through the various establishments that were set up in all branches of the service. The three most important units under control of the Department of the Army were Fort Jackson, largest of the state's military posts and especially significant as an induction center—the great majority of induction deliveries in the State went there—and at the training ground of the First Army; Camp Croft, near Spartanburg, a great infantry center; and the Greenville Army Air Base, home of the B-25 training program. Others almost as important were Shaw Field at Sumter, the Columbia Army Air Base, the Florence Army Air Field, Coronaco Army Air Field at Greenwood, Myrtle Beach Army Air Field, and Walterboro Army Air Field. In addition, the Army was in charge of the Charleston Army Air Field, the Charleston Port of Embarkation, Fort Moultrie, Stark General Hospital, and Fort Sumter, all in or near Charleston.

Parris Island, South Carolina, near the historic old town of Beaufort, was of course the great training center for the Marine Corps on the east coast, and many a Leatherneck took his "boot training" there.

The Sixth Naval District had its headquarters at the base in Charleston.

VII. Educational Contributions

Like their sister institutions in other states, the colleges and universities of South Carolina were quick to rally to the call of the government for the provision of various types of training on their campuses. Almost every major educational institution in the state had at least one armed service training program under way; some of them carried on more. In many instances this was work carried out under difficulties, as with the entrance of this country into the War, college faculties promptly lost many of their specialists, particularly in the physical sciences. Many professors who remained behind at the colleges found themselves handling classes in the armed service programs in courses for which they had little background.

The University of South Carolina was particularly active. Just prior to our entrance in the War the University participated in a Civilian Pilot Training Program, an Engineering, Science and Management War Training Program, and a Naval ROTC Program. After we were actually in the fighting the University had a very large Naval Flight Preparatory School, an extensive Navy V-12 program, and also took part in the War Training Service of the Civil Aeronautics Authority. After V-J Day the University was selected as one of the fifty-two universities to have a peace-time Naval ROTC Program.

Clemson Agricultural College, also a state-supported school, was likewise a beehive. It had a Pre-Flight Training Program, an Army Specialized Training Program —Engineer Unit; a Specialized Training in Reassignment Unit; and an Army Specialized Training Reserves Program.

Winthrop College—the South Carolina College for Women—carried on a Civilian Pilot Training Ground Instruction Preliminary Course from July 13, 1940 to March 17, 1943. It had a Pre-Flight School for the Army Air Forces from March 15, 1943, to June 30, 1944.

General C. P. Summerall, former Chief of Staff of the Army and now for many years president of The Citadel—the state's historic military college—says of the work done there: "During the World War II the military program of The Citadel was necessarily altered. Reserve commissions were not given through the ROTC; therefore cadets could not receive commissions upon graduation. The primary mission of the military instruction offered during these years at The Citadel was to prepare cadets for entrance into an Officer Candidate School. The whole program was primarily concerned with the Ground Forces; hence there was no pre-flight training."

Anderson College trained nurses, and six of its girls gave their lives in service. Coker College continued its excellent work in general education. Converse College organized themselves into an Auxiliary Corps, trained by officers from nearby Camp Croft. Furman University had a glider pilot training unit, and later a pre-flight program for the Army. Newberry College had a naval pre-flight school, and Erskine College also had a pre-flight program. For fifteen months in 1943-1944 the campus of Wofford College was given over wholly to the training of an Army Air Corps unit, while the few civilians then enrolled took their work at Converse and the Spartanburg Junior College. Limestone, Lander, and the College of Charleston had no special military programs, but shaped their general course to make them of as much value as possible in the emergency.

In addition South Carolina—working especially through the state University and the State Department of Education—stepped up its adult education program in an effort to have the basic issues of the conflict better understood by all citizens. So-called Citizens Education Centers were organized and operated in many towns and cities as a part of the plan to keep the public as well informed as possible. In the larger cities these Centers were attended by thousands of people, but many a Center held in a rural school was also packed to capacity.

VIII. Industry and Agriculture

Over the years South Carolina has been predominantly an agricultural state. Until very recently it had virtually no industry save in the field of cotton textiles, centered in the Piedmont area of the Up Country. It was therefore to be expected that most of the state's industrial contribution to the war effort would be made by the textile plants. This proved to be the case, although other industries made their appearance in the State and are continuing in operation. Existing plants converted from their normal operations with all speed in order that they might be able to serve the government in the manufacture of needed goods.

For a state then primarily agricultural, South Carolina had many industrial establishments to win the coveted Army and Navy E awards. Four-star winners were: Aragon Baldwin Mills, Whitmire Plant, Whitmire; Beaumont Manufacturing Company, Spartanburg; Equinox Mill, Anderson; Fairforest Finishing Company, Spartanburg; Gossett Mills, Ladlassie Plant, Anderson; Gossett Mills, Riverside Plant, Anderson; Gossett Mills, Pendleton Plant, Pendleton; Raybestos—Manhattan, Inc., General Asbestos and Rubber Division, North Charleston; Reeves Brothers, Inc., Mills Mill No. 1, Greenville; Reeves Brothers, Inc., Mills Mill No. 2, Woodruff; U. S. Navy Yard, Charleston; and Wannamaker Chemical Company, Inc., Orangeburg. Three-star winners were Mathews Cotton Mill, Greenwood; Mt. Vernon—Woodbury Mills, Inc., Columbia Mills, Columbia; Sonoco Products Company, Hartsville; Springs Cotton Mills, Eureka Plant, Chester; Springs Cotton Mills, Fort Mill Plant No. 1, Fort Mill; Springs Cotton Mills, Fort Mill Plant No. 2, Fort Mill; Springs Cotton Mills, Gayle Plant, Chester; Springs Cotton Mills, Kershaw Plant, Kershaw; Springs Cotton Mills, Lancaster Plant, Lancaster; Springs Cotton Mills, Springstein Plant, Chester; and Union Bleachery, Greenville. Winners of two-star awards were Carolina Industries, Sumter; Gossett Mills, Toxaway Plant, Anderson. One star went to Darlington Veneer Company, Inc., Plant No. 2, Darlington; Darlington Veneer Company, Inc., Plant No. 3; Drayton Mills, Incs., Spartanburg; Pittsburg Metallurgical Company, Inc., Charleston Plant, Charleston; United States Rubber Company, Winnsboro Mills, Winnsboro; and Ware Shoals Manufacturing Company, Ware Shoals.

Awards also were bestowed on Bath Mills, Inc., Bath; Convenience, Inc., Greenville; Charleston Shipbuilding and Drydock Company, Charleston; Firestone Textiles (subsidiary of The Firestone Tire and Rubber Company), Bennettsville; and Springdale Finishing South, Inc., Whitney.

Just as industry pushed itself for an all-out effort, so too South Carolina farmers did everything possible to increase production of cotton, corn, tobacco, and the other staples for which the state is famous. Many agricultural production records fell during the war period as farmers exerted themselves to almost superman efforts.

IX. Summary

Up Country—Low Country—in between—all South Carolina rallied to the war effort in a way that reflects only honor and glory on the citizens of the Palmetto State. Whether they served on the firing front, the production line, or in one of the myriads of necessary but not so colorful jobs that an all-out war effort demands, they did their part.

But with the record of history standing as it does, there could never have been any doubt that South Carolinians would have done otherwise.

SOUTH CAROLINA'S WORLD WAR II MEDAL OF HONOR WINNERS

He who possesses the Medal of Honor is the holder of the highest military award for bravery that can be given to any individual in the United States of America.

This symbol of bronze, wreathed in green enamel and held by a white starred ribbon of blue silk, bestows upon the man who has won it a great privilege—that of sharing in the company of the few heroes who have been honored by the award of the same Medal he wears.

The Medal of Honor was won in only one way during World War II. That was by a deed of personal bravery or self-sacrifice, above and beyond the call of duty, while a member of the American armed forces, in actual combat with an enemy of the nation.

In their provisions for judging whether a man is entitled to the Medal service regulations permit of no margin of doubt or error. The deed of the winner must be proved by incontestable evidence of at least two eye witnesses; it must be so outstanding that it clearly distinguishes his gallantry beyond the call of duty from lesser forms of bravery; it must involve the risk of his life; and it must be the type of deed which if he had not done it, would not subject him to any justified criticism.

The names and complete citations for all of the Medal of Honor winners from the state of South Carolina are listed on the following pages. These histories are taken from the official records of the War Department and Navy Department.

ATKINS, THOMAS E.

Pfc. Thomas E. Atkins

Rank and Organization: Private First Class, Company A, 127th Infantry, 32nd Infantry Division. Place and Date: Villa Verde Trail, Luzon, Philippine Islands, 10 Mar., 1945. Entered service at: Campobello, S. C. Birth: Campobello, S. C. Citation: He fought gallantly on the Villa Verde Trail, Luzon, Philippine Islands. With two companions he occupied a position on a ridge outside the perimeter defense established by the First Platoon on a high hill. At about 3 a.m., two companies of Japanese attacked with rifle and machine-gun fire, grenades, TNT charges, and land mines, severely wounding Private Akins and killing his two companions. Despite the intense hostile fire and pain from his deep wound, he held his ground and returned heavy fire. After the attack was repulsed, he remained in his precarious position to repel any subsequent assaults instead of returning to the American lines for medical treatment. An enemy machine gun, set up within twenty yards of his fox hole, vainly attempted to drive him off or silence his gun. The Japanese repeatedly made fierce attacks, but for four hours, Private Atkins determinedly remained in his fox hole bearing the brunt of each assault and maintaining steady and accurate fire until each charge was repulsed. At 7 a.m., 13 enemy dead lay in front of his position; he had fired 400 rounds, all he and his two dead companions possessed, and had used three rifles until each had jammed too badly for further operation. He withdrew during a lull to secure a rifle and more ammunition, and was persuaded to remain for medical treatment. While waiting, he saw a Japanese within the perimeter and seizing a nearby rifle, killed him. A few minutes later, while lying on a litter, he discovered an enemy group moving up behind the platoon's lines. Despite his severe wound, he sat up, delivered heavy rifle fire against the group and forced them to withdraw. Private Atkins' superb bravery and his fearless determination to hold his post against the main force of repeated enemy attacks, even though painfully wounded, were major factors in enabling his comrades to maintain their lines against a numerically superior enemy force.

Lt. Col. George L. Mabry, Jr.

Rank and Organization: Lieutenant Colonel, 2nd Battalion, 8th Infantry, 4th Infantry Division. Place and Date: Hurtgen Forest near Schevenhutte, Germany, 20 Nov. 1944. Entered service at Sumter, S. C. Birth: Sumter, S. C. Citation: He was commanding the Second Battalion, 8th Infantry, in an attack through the Hurtgen Forest near Schevenhutte, Germany on 20 Nov., 1944. During the early phases of the assault, the leading elements of his battalion were halted by a minefield and immobilized by heavy hostile fire. Advancing alone into the mined area, Colonel Mabry established a safe route of passage. He then moved ahead of the foremost scouts, personally leading the attack, until confronted by a booby-trapped double concertina obstacle. With the assistance of the scouts, he disconnected the explosives and cut a path through the wire. Upon moving through the opening, he observed three enemy in foxholes whom he captured at bayonet point. Driving steadily forward he paced the assault against three log bunkers which housed mutually supported automatic weapons. Racing up a slope ahead of his men, he found the initial bunker deserted, then pushed on to the second where he was suddenly confronted by nine onrushing enemy. Using the butt of his rifle, he felled an adversary and bayoneted a second, before his scouts came to his aid and assisted him in overcoming the others in hand-to-hand combat. Accompanied by the riflemen, he charged the third bunker under point-blank small arms fire and led the way into the fortification from which he prodded six enemy at bayonet point. Following the consolidation of this area, he led his battalion across 300 yards of fire-swept terrain to seize a defensive position which menaced the enemy on both flanks, and provided his regiment a firm foothold on the approach to the Cologne Plain. Colonel Mabry's superlative courage, daring and leadership in an operation of major importance exemplify the finest characteristics of military service.

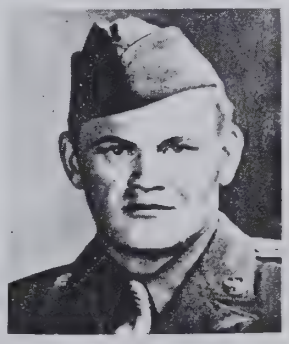

McWHORTER, WILLIAM A.

Pfc. William A. McWhorter

Rank and Organization: Private First Class, Company M, 126th Infantry, 32nd Infantry Division. Place and Date: Leyte, Philippine Islands, 5 Dec., 1944. Entered service at: Liberty, S. C. Birth: Liberty, S. C. Citation: He displayed gallantry and intrepidity at the risk of his life above and beyond the call of duty while engaged in operations against the enemy. Private McWhorter, a machine gunner, was emplaced in a defensive position with one assistant when the enemy launched a heavy attack. Manning the gun and opening fire, he killed several members of an advancing demolition squad, when one of the enemy succeeded in throwing a fused demolition charge in the entrenchment. Without hesitation, and with complete disregard for his own safety, Private McWhorter picked up the improvised grenade and deliberately held it close to his body, bending over and turning away from his companion. The charge exploded, killing him instantly, but leaving his companion unharmed. Private McWhorter's outstanding heroism and supreme sacrifice in shielding a comrade reflect the highest traditions of the military service.

SMITH, FURMAN L.

Pvt. Furman L. Smith

Rank and Organization: Private, 135th Infantry, 34th Infantry Division. Place and Date: Near Lanuvio, Italy, 31, May, 1944. Entered service at Central, S. C. Birth: Six Mile, S. C. Citation: For conspicuous gallantry and intrepidity at the risk of his life above and beyond the call of duty. In its attack on a strong point, an infantry company was held up by intense enemy fire. The group to which Private Smith belonged was far in the lead when attacked by a force of 80 Germans. The squad leader and one other man were seriously wounded and other members of the group withdrew to the company position, but Private Smith refused to leave his wounded comrades. He placed them in the shelter of shell craters and then alone faced a strong enemy counterattack, temporarily checking it by his accurate rifle fire at close range, killing and wounding many of the foe. Against overwhelming odds, he stood his ground until shot down and killed, rifle in hand.

OWENS, ROBERT A.

Sgt. Robert A. Owens

Rank and Organization: Sergeant, Marine Corps. Place and Date: Cape Torokina, Bougainville, Solomon Islands, 1 November, 1943. Birth: Drayton, S. C. Citation: For conspicuous gallantry and intrepidity at the risk of his life above and beyond the call of duty while serving with a Marine Division, in action against enemy Japanese forces during extremely hazardous landing operations at Cape Torokina, Bougainville, Solomon Islands, on 1 November, 1943. Forced to pass within disastrous range of a strongly protected, well-camouflaged Japanese 75 mm. Regimental Gun strategically located on the beach, our landings were suffering heavy losses in casualties and boats while attempting to approach the beach and the success of the operations was seriously threatened. Observing the effectiveness of Marine rifle and grenade attacks against the incessant, devastating fire of the enemy weapon and aware of the urgent need for prompt action, Sergeant Owens unhesitatingly determined to charge the gun bunker from the front and, calling on four of his comrades to assist him, carefully placed them to cover the fire of two adjacent hostile bunkers. Choosing a moment that provided a fair opportunity for passing these bunkers, he immediately charged into the mouth of the steadily firing cannon and entered the emplacement through the fire port, driving the gun crew out of the rear door and insuring their destruction before he himself was wounded. Indomitable and aggressive in the face of almost certain death, Sergeant Owens silenced a powerful gun which was of inestimable value to the Japanese defense and, by his brilliant initiative and heroic spirit of self-sacrifice, contributed immeasurably to the success of the vital landing operations. His valiant conduct reflects the highest credit upon himself and the United States Naval Service.

WORLD WAR II

HONOR LIST

Dead and Missing, State of South Carolina

Army, Navy, Marines, Coast Guard

Compiled from records furnished by War Department and Navy Department.

CASUALTY LISTS

The casualty lists on the following pages were prepared from information furnished by the Adjutant General for the War Department Bureau of Public Relations and from the State Summary of War Casualties prepared by the Casualty Section, Office of Public Information, Navy Department. The lists attempt to include all casualties for all branches of the services. Since these lists are otherwise difficult to obtain, the publishers of "Young American Patriots" feel that they are rendering a distinct service in arranging them in County order for the Army and in alphabetical order for the Navy, Marine Corps and Coast Guard.

The state of South Carolina contained 1.41 per cent of the population of the United States and possessions (excluding the Philippines) in 1940 and contributed 1.20 per cent of the total number who entered the Army. Of these men and women who served in the Army, 2.95 per cent failed to return. This figure represents 1.11 per cent of the Army's total Dead and Missing.

CHINESE AIRBORNE INFANTRY

Soldiers of a well trained Chinese Army examine the insignia on an American airman of the India-China Wing, Air Transport Command, who fly them to points where they are needed. The insignia is used as identification, should the transports be forced down in parts of China where the people are unfamiliar with Americans or the war.

A GENERAL VIEW OF AN AIR EVACUATION STRIP somewhere in France. The wounded are being transferred from ambulances to the great "Ships of Mercy" which will swiftly carry them to base hospitals.

ONE OF THE SECRETS of U.S. success in keeping the number of deaths among battle casualties (wounded) at three per cent, was the promptness with which their injuries were attended to. This was due, in no small measure, to the smooth functioning of the Air Evacuation System of handling the wounded.

RESERVATION

THE development and upkeep of our war-time Army and Navy require a huge number of camps, posts, airfields and other centers of activity. This map includes the majority of those within the borders of the United States. To avoid congestion, the recreational areas, camps, colleges and universities used by the Army and Navy Specialized Training Program, are not shown. There are other omissions, for reasons of security, and no questions regarding centers not shown on the map can be answered. The divisions outlining the nine service commands and the Military District of Washington are essentially correct, but part of New York State is under the First Service Command only as far as coast defenses are concerned.
